Communities from Murphy to Manteo

Throughout the pandemic, we've made it clear how important it is to invest in our communities through inclusive policies that will help North Carolinians recover. We support outreach on Economic Impact Payments and develop relationships with local communities to connect them more deeply to budgetary decisions and how the state allocates public resources. These issues affect all North Carolinians, especially communities of color and those with low incomes.

Policies Impact People

We help partners and legislators make value-based arguments for significant structural changes to the state tax code in order to deliver long overdue anti-racist, equitable outcomes. Most vitally, we connect the dots between these issues and communities, and make a case for robust, people-first policies. For example:

The richest

of households make an average of 28 times more than the poorest 20% of households.

Median worker earnings are

of what it takes for a family of 1 adult and 2 children to make ends meet.

Our agenda lays out the principles and policies that must guide North Carolina's ongoing response to the pandemic and address the underlying systemic changes necessary to ensure every North Carolinian—white, Black, and brown—thrives as part of an equitable recovery. This is the only way to help our state rebuild and be stronger for future generations.
